PEARLS of EXPRESSIONS

HOLD FAST TO YOUR DREAMS

Hold fast to your dreams
They shelter you through lonely nights
They become your soft pillow
That's puts destination in your sights

Hold tight the memories
The heart ache that burns
For the one who wins
Is the one who remembers & learn

Nurture the moments,
Handle with care.
For destiny stares.
For each heart there is a pair.

Cast off the anger
And its deep rooted seed
Remember the anger
That caused your heart to bleed

Snuggle up to each memory
Like a blanket held tight
Bringing your vision
Guidance and sunlight.

Push away despair, nurture the hope
So impossible it seems
But the only way out
Is to hold fast to your dreams

Wings of Fire

In the embers of youth, a fire ignited,
Wings of passion, dreams undivided,
College days ablaze, ambitions take flight,
With courage and grace, we'll reach new heights.

In classrooms, we soar, minds ignite,
Knowledge blooms, like stars in the night,
Challenges embraced, we rise from the pyre,
Wings of fire, our spirits inspire.

Through friendships forged, memories spun,
Together we'll shine, like the morning sun,
In the dance of life, we'll leap and aspire,
With wings of fire, we'll soar and inspire.

-Ms. Fareeha Begam

Rise, Reset, Repeat

Fell today? That's okay,
Learn, unlearn, find your way.
Every pitch, every fall,
Brings you closer, standing tall.

Dreams aren't built in a day,
Keep the fire, pave your way.
Rise again, don't retreat,
Success is built—reset, repeat.

How to realize one's Potential... Move into Crisis!

Once upon a time, a king received two beautiful birds as a gift. Excited, he gave them to his best trainer to teach them how to fly. Months passed, and while one bird flew high in the sky, the other stayed on its branch, refusing to move.

The king tried everything—healers, magicians, and even his royal advisors—but the bird wouldn't move. Frustrated, he asked a farmer for help. The next morning, to everyone's surprise, the bird was flying high above the palace gardens.

Amazed, the king asked the farmer, "How did you make it fly?" The farmer humbly replied, "It was simple, your highness. I just cut the branch it was sitting on."

Just like that bird, we often hold onto our comfort zones, afraid to take risks. But true potential is unlocked only when we let go of fear and push ourselves beyond limits. So, dare to take the leap—because only then will you realize how high you can fly.

Short Story on Time Management

Once, a wise professor wanted to teach his students about the importance of time management. He took a large empty jar and a box of rocks, pebbles, and sand. He started by placing the rocks, which symbolized the most important things in life like family, health, and career, into the jar.

He asked the students if the jar was full, and they agreed. But then he poured pebbles into the jar, and they filled the gaps between the rocks. The students chuckled as they learned that the pebbles represented other significant aspects of life, like a house or a car.

Again, the professor asked if the jar was full, and the students nodded. However, he then poured sand into the jar, and it seeped into the spaces left by the rocks and pebbles. The sand represented the small, less crucial things in life.

The wise professor explained, "This jar represents your life. If you fill it with sand and pebbles first, there won't be room for the essential rocks. Focus on the important things, your family, your career, your health, and prioritize them."

The lesson was clear - manage your time wisely. Start with the big rocks, the important tasks in life, and then fit in the smaller pebbles and sand around them. If you spend all your time on trivial matters, you won't have time for what truly matters.

So, take care of the rocks first - spend quality time with your loved ones, invest in your career and health, and prioritize what truly brings meaning to your life. The rest, the pebbles and sand, will find their place naturally. Believe in yourself, set your priorities right, and make every moment count!
